HOSTED EVENTS

Haunted weekends, sold out and run from your phone.

Rooms or seats, confirmations with passes, a door that works with no signal, and every letter written for you.

Rooms or seats

Guests ask for a room or pick their seats on your plan.

No signal, no problem

Passes and the door keep working in the cellar.

$99 an event

However many nights. Guests pay you directly.

HOW IT WORKS

Five people. One unforgettable weekend.

Every hosted event has the same cast. IsHaunted gives each of them exactly the screen they need, and nothing they don't.

FINDS IT, ASKS, GETS A PASS

The guest

Browses the event with its photographs and access notes, asks for a room or picks seats, and keeps a QR pass on the web and the iPhone.

RUNS THE WEEKEND

The organizer

Confirms parties into rooms, writes to everybody at once, invites helpers, and sees the numbers at a glance.

LETS PEOPLE IN

The helper on the door

Accepts an invitation that grants the door and nothing else, then checks parties in by scan or by name.

SAYS WHO HOSTS THERE

The venue

Shows the building's history and photographs, and approves the organizers who want to run nights under its roof.

KEEPS IT TRUSTWORTHY

IsHaunted

Watches every event on one dashboard, removes what breaks the rules, returns the credit, and hears appeals.

From “that looks amazing” to a pass in their pocket.

1 The event page

Photographs from the venue, the nights, and what's left.

2 Getting in and around

Stairs, parking and low light, said before anybody books.

Getting in and getting around

The hotel has no lift: the bedrooms are up one flight of stairs, and the ballroom and bar are on the ground floor.

Some of the hunt is in low light. Park on the street or in the lot behind the hotel.

Ask Paranormal365 for a place

Nothing is held until they answer, and nothing is paid here.

Never mind

3 Ask for a room

Nights, party size and a note. Nothing is held or paid here.

4 Told straight away

The booking card says it is with the venue, and so does the letter.

Guests pay you, not us. Prices are shown so nobody is surprised; money is settled between the guest and the venue.

5 A pass for the door

The QR pass arrives with the confirmation, waits under What I'm going to, and opens on the iPhone with no signal.

The whole weekend on one board.

A door that opens with no signal.

Old buildings eat phone signal. The pass, the door list and check-in keep working in the cellar, and catch up when the bars come back.

1 The list for tonight

Who is expected, who is in, and walk-ups added on the spot.

2 Find them by name

No pass to hand? Type part of a name and check the party in.

3 Or scan on the iPhone

The camera reads the pass; tap the reservation to check them in.

4 What the kitchen needs

Dietary notes tallied for each night and printed a page per night, so the kitchen never scrolls a phone.

Offline on the iPhone. Arrivals recorded with no signal keep the time they happened and send when the phone reconnects.

Two hundred seats. No account needed.

For an evening in the ballroom, guests pick their own seats on your plan. Somebody without an account picks too, and we email them a link to hold the seats.

If this wasn't you, do nothing: the places go back by themselves and no account is made.

3 A hold that lapses by itself

Picked seats are held for the venue's chosen time, shown to everybody else as pending, and let go if nobody confirms.

The building says yes. We keep it honest.

1 A venue page worth sharing

History, house rules, a photo library and what's on next.

2 Nobody hosts without the venue

Organizers ask first; the venue approves the nights and what it lends.

The form is titled 'Removed by ishaunted'. It explains that an event was removed on 09/13/2026 for not meeting guidelines. It includes an 'Appeal' section with instructions on how to appeal. Below this is a 'Why it should come back' section with a text area for the user to provide reasons. A 'Send the appeal' button is at the bottom.

3 Removed, fairly

If an event breaks the rules it comes off the site, guests are told, and the credit goes back.

4 And a person reads the appeal

Upheld appeals bring the event back as a draft, ready to publish again.
