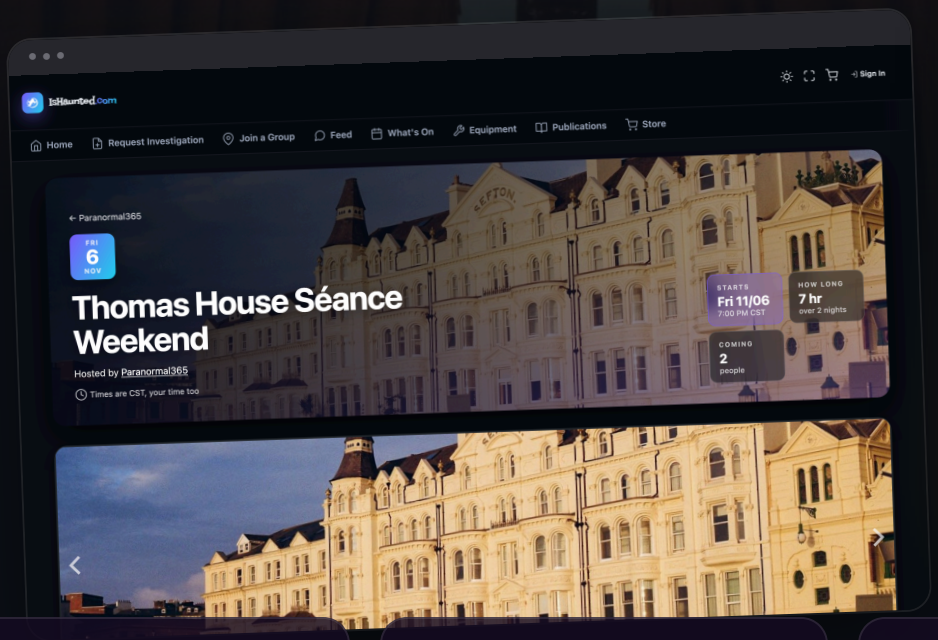
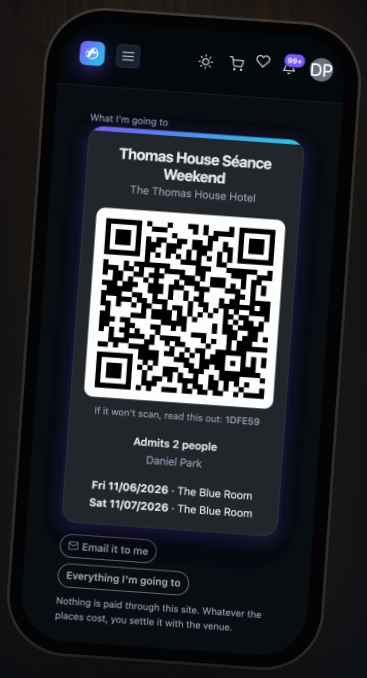
HOSTED EVENTS

Haunted weekends, sold out and run from your phone.

Rooms or seats, confirmations with passes, a door that works with no signal, and every letter written for you.





Rooms or seats

Guests ask for a room or pick their seats on your plan.

No signal, no problem

Passes and the door keep working in the cellar.

$99 an event

However many nights. Guests pay you directly.

HOW IT WORKS

Five people. One unforgettable weekend.

Every hosted event has the same cast. IsHaunted gives each of them exactly the screen they need, and nothing they don't.

FINDS IT, ASKS, GETS A PASS

The guest

Browses the event with its photographs and access notes, asks for a room or picks seats, and keeps a QR pass on the web and the iPhone.

RUNS THE WEEKEND

The organizer

Confirms parties into rooms, writes to everybody at once, invites helpers, and sees the numbers at a glance.

LETS PEOPLE IN

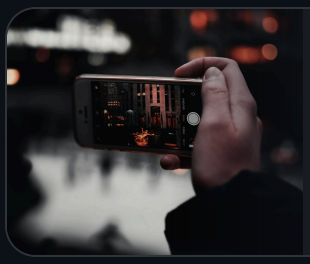
The helper on the door

Accepts an invitation that grants the door and nothing else, then checks parties in by scan or by name.

SAYS WHO HOSTS THERE

The venue

Shows the building's history and photographs, and approves the organizers who want to run nights under its roof.

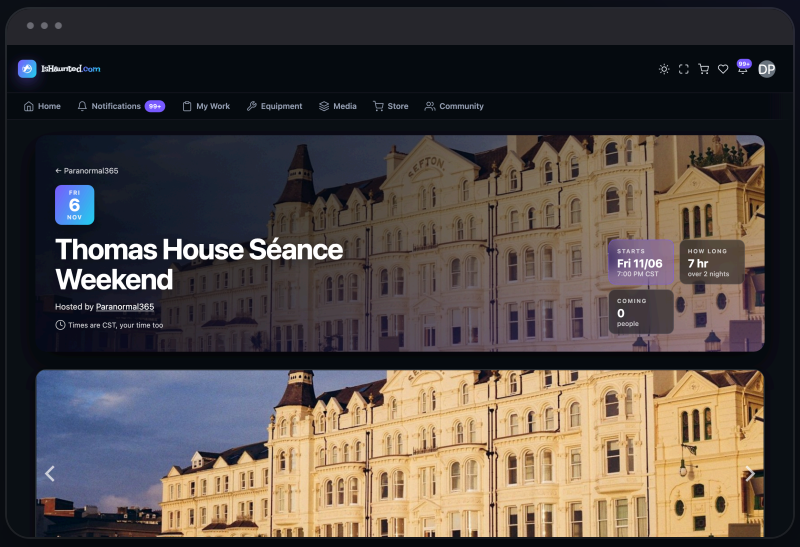


KEEPS IT TRUSTWORTHY

IsHaunted

Watches every event on one dashboard, removes what breaks the rules, returns the credit, and hears appeals.

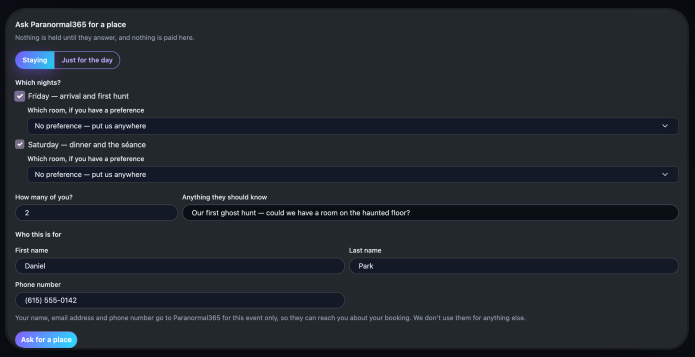
From “that looks amazing” to a pass in their pocket.



1 The event page
Photographs from the venue, the nights, and what's left.

2 Getting in and around
Stairs, parking and low light, said before anybody books.

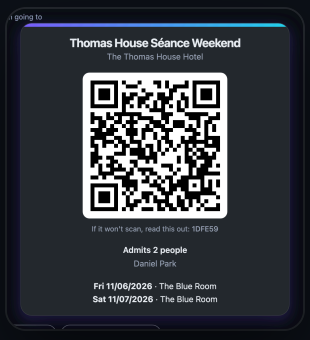
Getting in and getting around
The hotel has no lift: the bedrooms are up one flight of stairs, and the ballroom and bar are on the ground floor.
Some of the hunt is in low light. Park on the street or in the lot behind the hotel.



3 Ask for a room
Nights, party size and a note. Nothing is held or paid here.

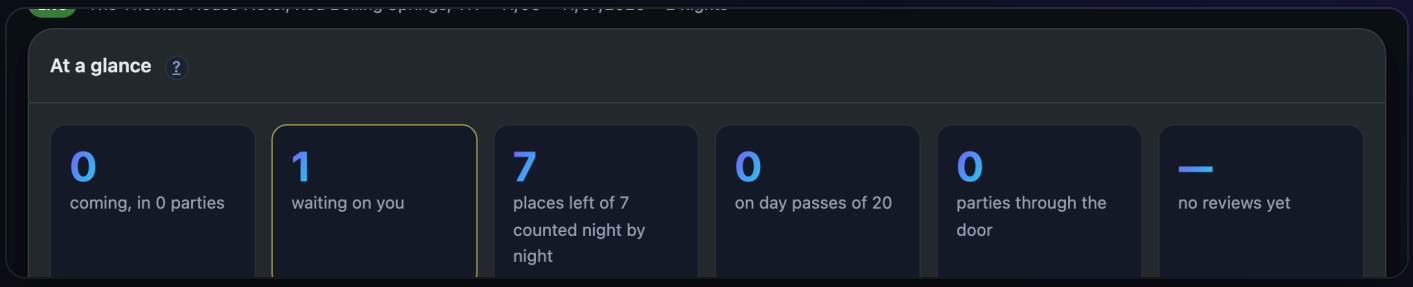
4 Told straight away
The booking card says it is with the venue, and so does the letter.

> Guests pay you, not us. Prices are shown so nobody is surprised; money is settled between the guest and the venue.



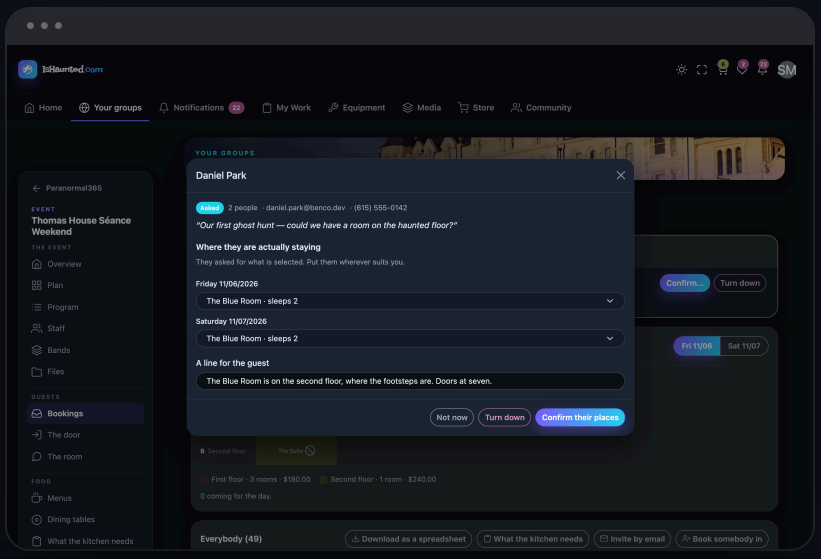
5 A pass for the door
The QR pass arrives with the confirmation, waits under What I'm going to, and opens on the iPhone with no signal.

The whole weekend on one board.



1 At a glance

People coming, parties waiting, places left night by night, arrivals and reviews.



2 Put them where it suits

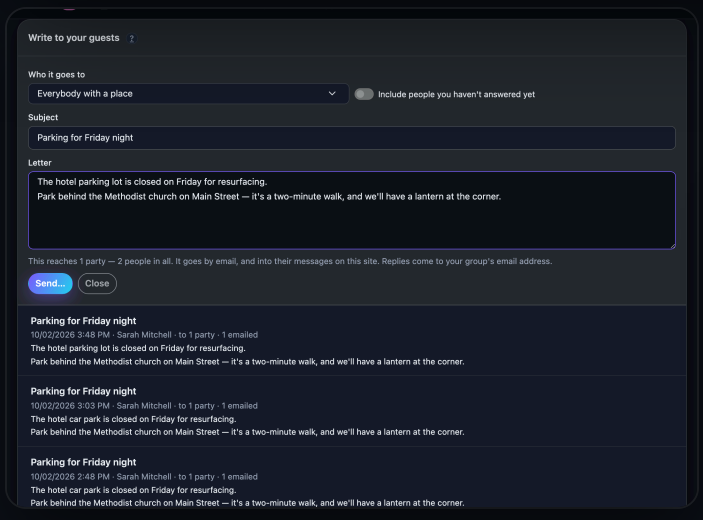
Confirm a party into the Blue Room with a line they will read. The pass goes with it.

3 Waiting on you first

Requests and holds sit at the top, soonest deadline first.

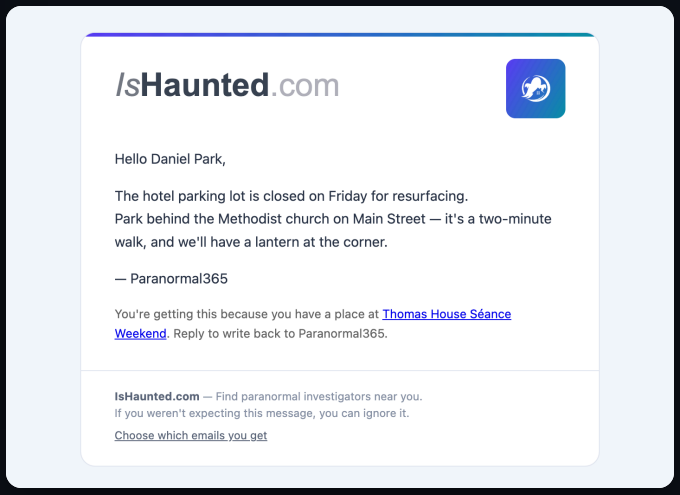
4 Helpers, not admins

Invite somebody to run the door without handing over the guest list.



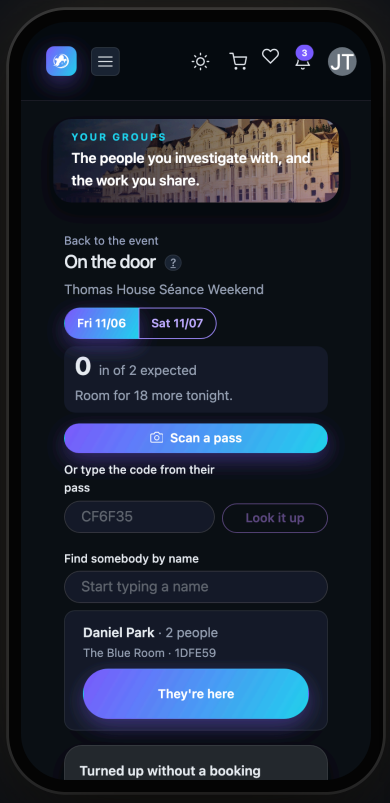
5 Write to everybody

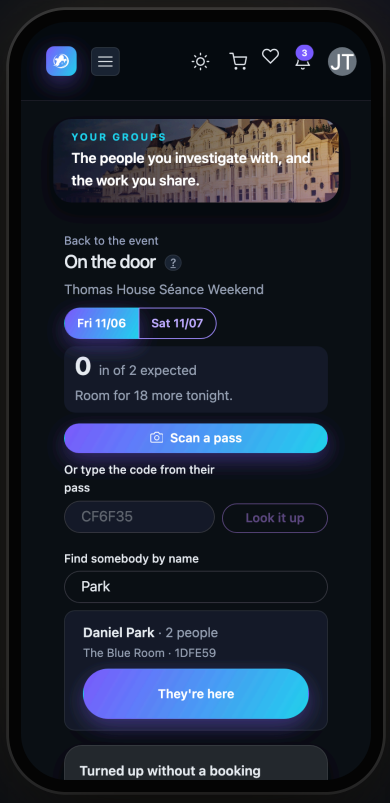
Parking moved? Doors at eight? One letter by email and in their messages, with the count shown before you send.

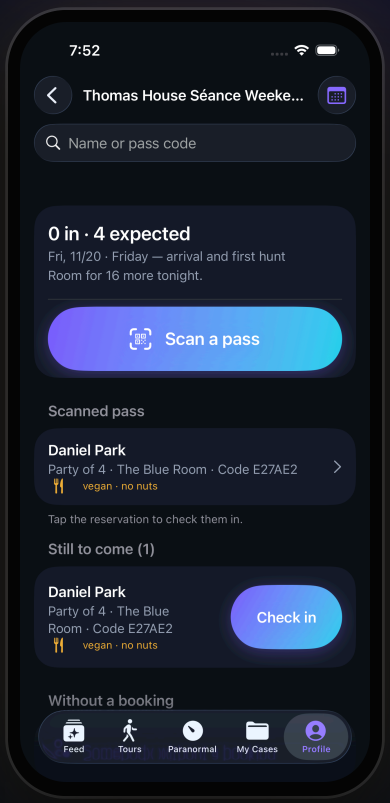


A door that opens with no signal.

Old buildings eat phone signal. The pass, the door list and check-in keep working in the cellar, and catch up when the bars come back.



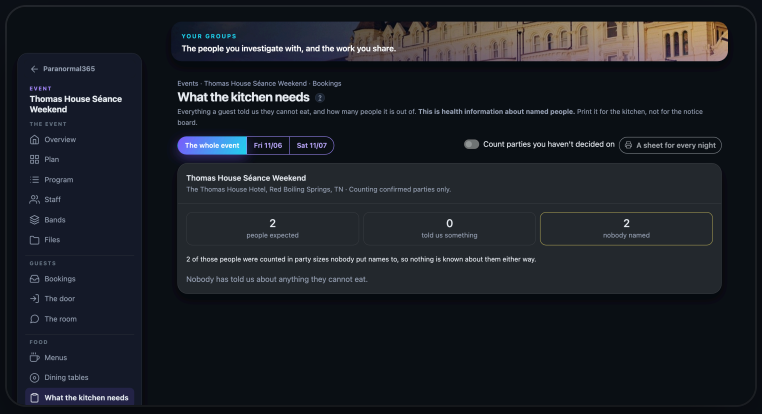




1 The list for tonight
Who is expected, who is in, and walk-ups added on the spot.

2 Find them by name
No pass to hand? Type part of a name and check the party in.

3 Or scan on the iPhone
The camera reads the pass; tap the reservation to check them in.



4 Menus, and what the kitchen needs
Designed menus on the event page with a PDF, in 25 looks, priced or included. Dietary notes tallied a page per night for the kitchen.

Offline on the iPhone. Arrivals recorded with no signal keep the time they happened and send when the phone reconnects.

Two hundred seats. No account needed.

For an evening in the ballroom, guests pick their own seats on your plan. Somebody without an account picks too, and we email them a link to hold the seats.

1 Pick on the plan
Sections and prices in a legend; taken and held seats cannot be picked.

2 On a phone, too
The plan scrolls in its own frame with a summary that stays in view.

3 A hold that lapses by itself
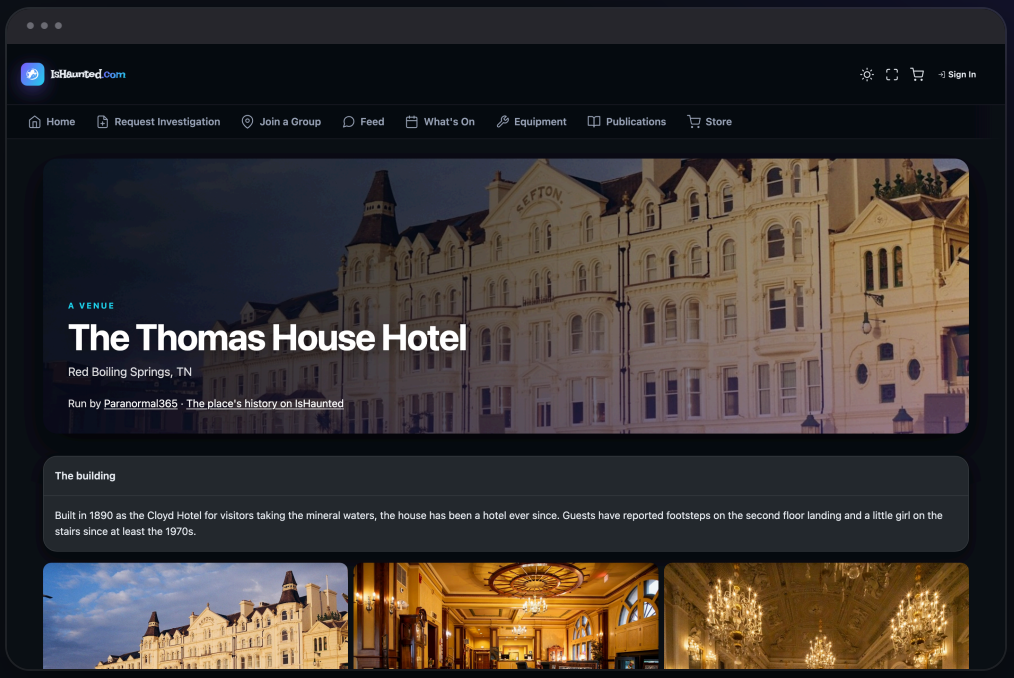
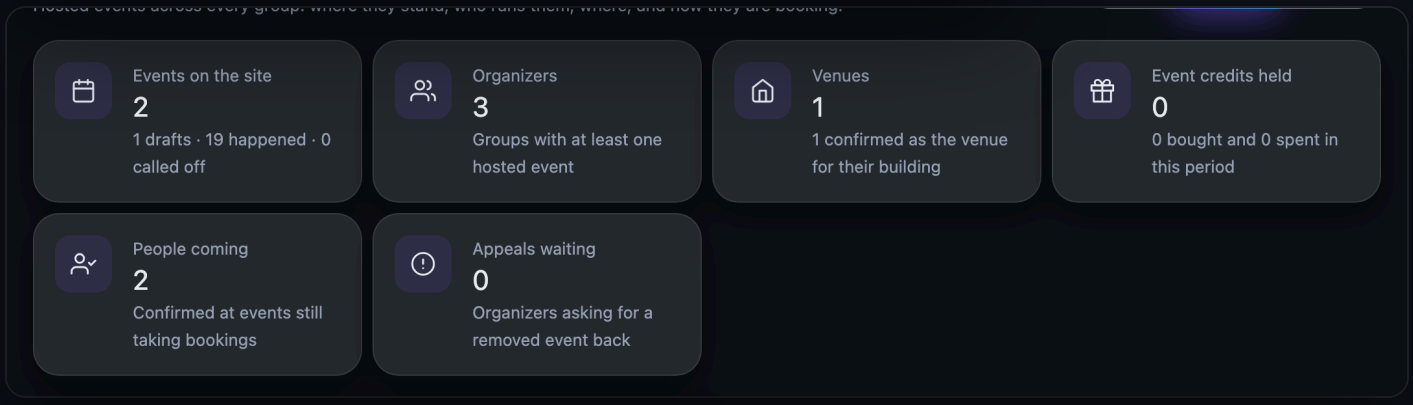
Picked seats are held for the venue's chosen time, shown to everybody else as pending, and let go if nobody confirms.

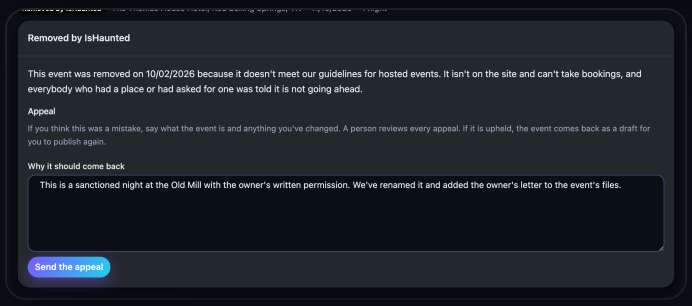
The building says yes. We keep it honest.



1 A venue page worth sharing
History, house rules, a photo library and what's on next.

2 Nobody hosts without the venue
Organizers ask first; the venue approves the nights and what it lends.





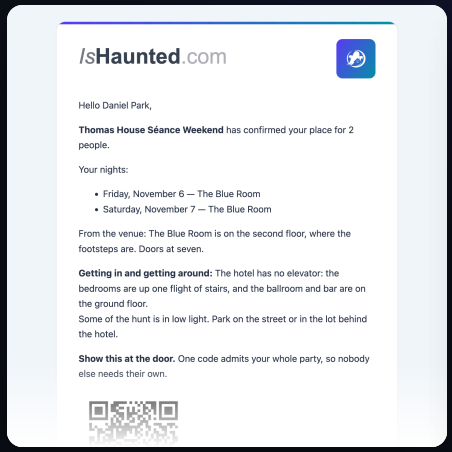
3 Removed, fairly
If an event breaks the rules it comes off the site, guests are told, and the credit goes back.

4 And a person reads the appeal
Upheld appeals bring the event back as a draft, ready to publish again.

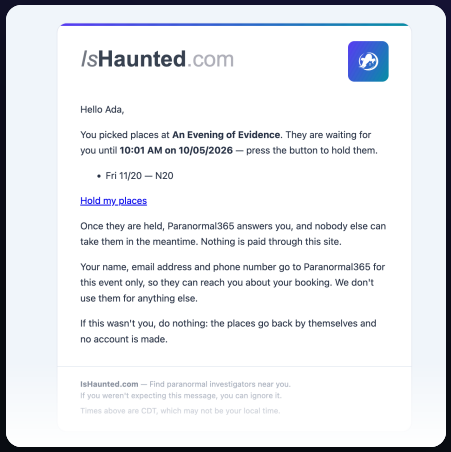
EVERY LETTER, WRITTEN FOR YOU

Nobody is left wondering.

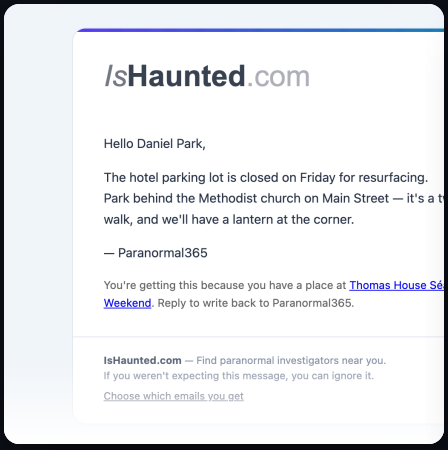
Your request is with them
Sent the moment a guest asks.



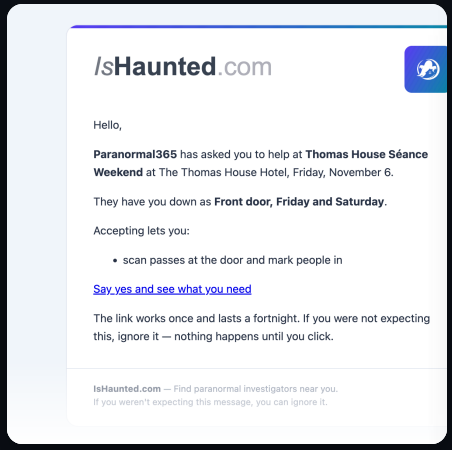
You're confirmed
With the rooms, access notes and the QR pass.



Hold your seats
The link for somebody without an account.



A note to every guest
Written once on the booking board.



Can you help?
A helper's invitation to run the door.

The organizer hears about every request.
