

ISHAUNTED.COM

Give every guest a ghost-hunting instrument.

IsHaunted.com for ghost tours, haunted events, and paranormal experiences

Your guests already arrive holding the most capable instrument on the tour — their phone. IsHaunted.com turns it into part of the experience: a live EMF meter and audio recorder in their hand, your tour on their map, and the photo they swear has something in the window posted to your page before they've finished telling the story.

What your guests get — free

- The IsHaunted app for iPhone and iPad, free. During your tour, any guest can open the Field Kit: a live magnetometer readout (the “EMF meter” of ghost-hunting television, honestly labeled), a sound-level meter, and an audio recorder that stamps every capture with time, place, and the room or stop where it happened — and plays it all back afterwards on one timeline.
- A place to put the evidence. Photos and recordings from your event can be submitted to you on the spot. Nothing goes public unless you accept it.
- Your next dates, one tap away. Your tours and their dates appear in the app and on the site, with sign-up built in — a guest who loved Friday's walk books the next one before they get home, gets your email with the meeting point and a calendar file, and a reminder the night before.
- Their own photographs, kept. Whatever a guest sends in from the night stays theirs: it is on your tour's page for them to download, and they are emailed before anything comes off the site.
- No account needed to come along. A guide can sign up a walk-up guest on the spot, and a guest without the app still counts.

What your business gets

You get	What it does for you
A page for each tour	Every walk gets its own page: the meeting point on a map with directions, how long it runs, who is guiding it, a slideshow of your photographs and your guests', the dates people can sign up for, and what previous guests said about it. Tours are public, so each one carries a pin on the home-page map and turns up in “what's near you” searches by people actively looking for exactly this.
The email your guests get	Write it once, in your own words. Every sign-up — and a reminder the night before — carries the meeting point, the time in your zone, who is guiding that night and what they look like , how you want to be paid, and a calendar file so their phone reminds them. Replies come to you, not to us.

Events with RSVP	Publish each tour or hunt as a public event. Guests RSVP from the site or the app; you see the list, cap the numbers when a night is full, and sign up walk-ups yourself. No booking software to buy.
Guest evidence, reviewed by you	Every submitted photo and recording lands in your review queue. Accept the good ones and they publish to your event and into your tour's slideshow — last night's chills become this morning's marketing, with zero effort from you. Photographs stay a month and recordings a week unless you keep them, and everybody who sent something in is emailed before it goes, so nobody loses a picture they wanted.
Ratings from the people who came	Only guests who were actually on a walk that has finished can rate it, so the stars on your page mean something. You can hide one you think is unfair; you cannot edit what somebody wrote, and neither can we.
Promoted placement	A promoted card in the group finder and on the home page, marked as such — seen by people searching for something haunted to do.
A publication of your own	Long-form stories about your locations, published under your name — the history behind each stop, written once, selling tours forever.

Why this beats a booking widget: booking software takes reservations. IsHaunted.com is where the audience already is — people browsing haunted places, reading investigations, and looking for something to do with their fascination. Your tour is the answer to the question they came to ask.

And when you run a bigger night

Séance weekends at a haunted hotel, a dinner and a hunt, an evening of evidence in a theatre: publish it as a hosted event. Guests ask for a room or pick their seats on your plan, get a confirmation with a QR pass, and are checked in at the door by name or by scanning — even with no signal, on the free iPhone app. You write to everybody at once, the kitchen gets a dietary sheet for each night, and guests share their photos in the event's room. One event credit is $99, however many nights it runs, and guests pay you directly — there is no ticket fee.

The offer

$29 / month or $290 / year

Per tour, however often you run it. One walk down one street is one tour whether you schedule it twice a year or four nights a week — bring every guide, run unlimited dates, and never be priced by the size of your team the way a paranormal group is. A second walk down a different street is a second tour. One extra ticket sold covers the month. Your first three months are on us while you see what it does for your bookings.

Getting started

- Reply to this email — that's it. We set up your page, your listing, and your first event with you. Or start it yourself: sign in, choose Start a Group, and pick ghost walking tour — your page is public from the first minute.

- Tell your guests one sentence: “Download the free IsHaunted app — tonight, your phone is your instrument.”
- Review what they caught. Accept the best photo of the night and it's on your page before breakfast.

IsHaunted.com · Nashville, TN · Every feature described here is live on the platform today; maps and directions on the site are Apple Maps. The iPhone and iPad apps are free for all users. Pricing shown is the introductory business rate and may change; the three-month trial applies to new business subscriptions and is limited to the first twenty-five.