THE WEBSITE, SEAT BY SEAT

The seller

A member who makes equipment and sells it through the store. Written for a developer joining the project.

WHO	SCREENS	CAPTURED
Seller	8	10/14/2026

Every screenshot shows simulated, seeded data, captured in dark mode while signed in as this user type. Nothing here is a real person, case or investigation. Where a page shows a refusal, that is the designed behavior for this seat.

The seller is an ordinary member everywhere else; Seller is an additive site role, given on the person's Site Roles tab. It opens a Selling workspace — in the menu once the store is switched on — for their own items and nobody else's. Every seller endpoint starts from the caller's own items, and another seller's item answers 404 rather than 403.

The split of powers is the design: a seller writes their words, pictures, options, stock, parts list, files, FAQ and versions, and asks for an item to go on sale; the store sets every price and approves. Each seller ships their own package with their own tracking, and is paid cost plus their approved asking price per unit, by hand, against an append-only earnings ledger.

How this site decides what you may see

Two things gate every surface, and they are different questions:

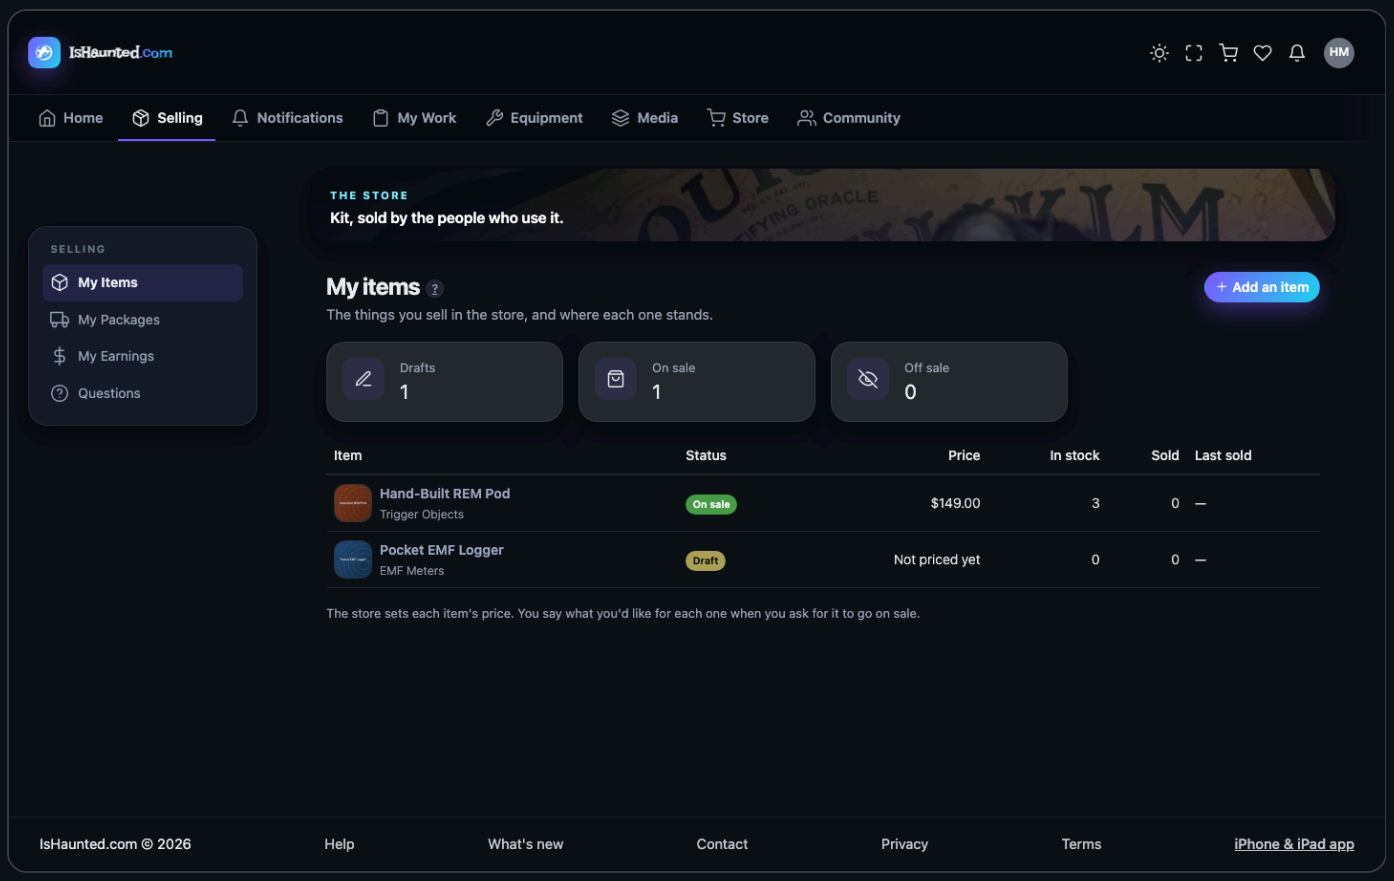

Your seat in a group — owner, administrator, member, viewer — answers "may this person do this?". The group's plan answers "does this group pay for this at all?". A member of a group whose plan excludes an area is refused for a completely different reason than a viewer who is not allowed to write, and the site says which.

> A refusal is never rendered as "nothing here." An empty list and a server saying no are different facts, and a page that shows the same gray nothing for both teaches people to distrust it. Every list goes through `LoadResult`, which carries loading, empty, refused, session-ended and rate-limited as distinct states — and every one of them has its own words on screen.

This matters when reading this document: where a screenshot shows a refusal, that is the designed behavior for this seat, not a broken page.

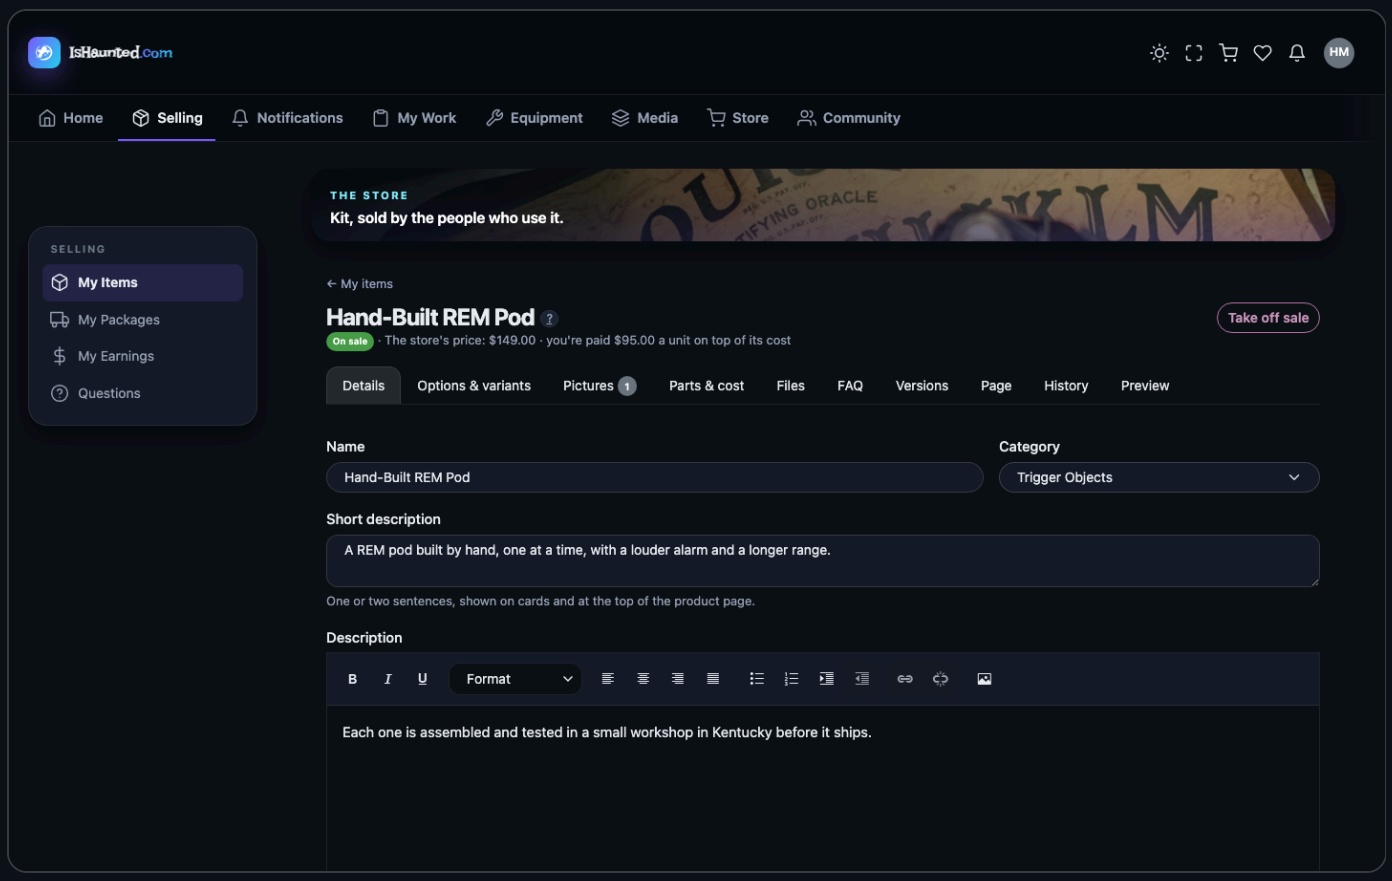

What this user sees, screen by screen

My items. Their items and where each stands: draft, on sale, off sale. The price is shown, never editable.

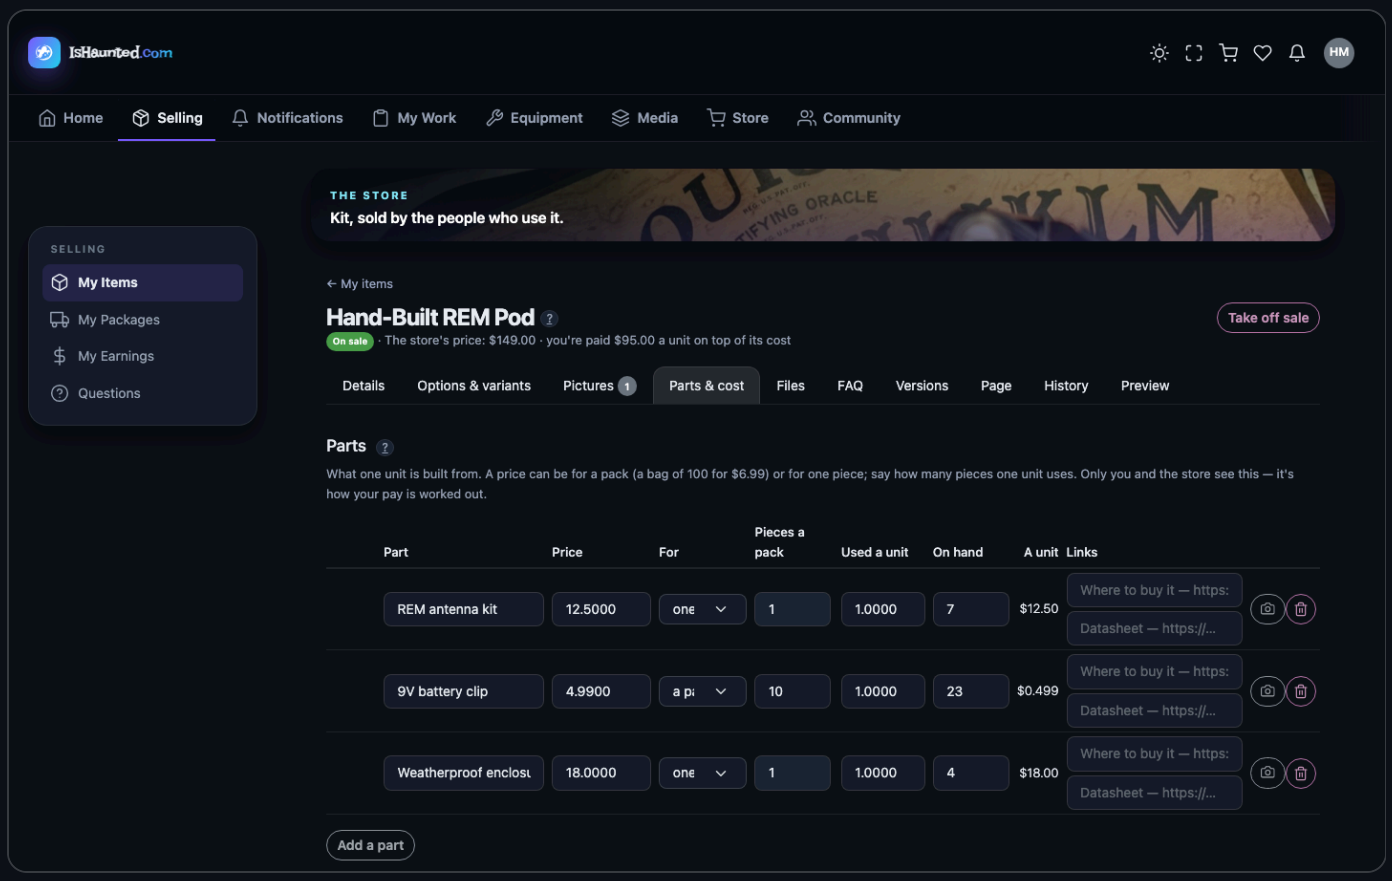

My items

An item. One item's editor. Every change lands in the item's history, marked as theirs.

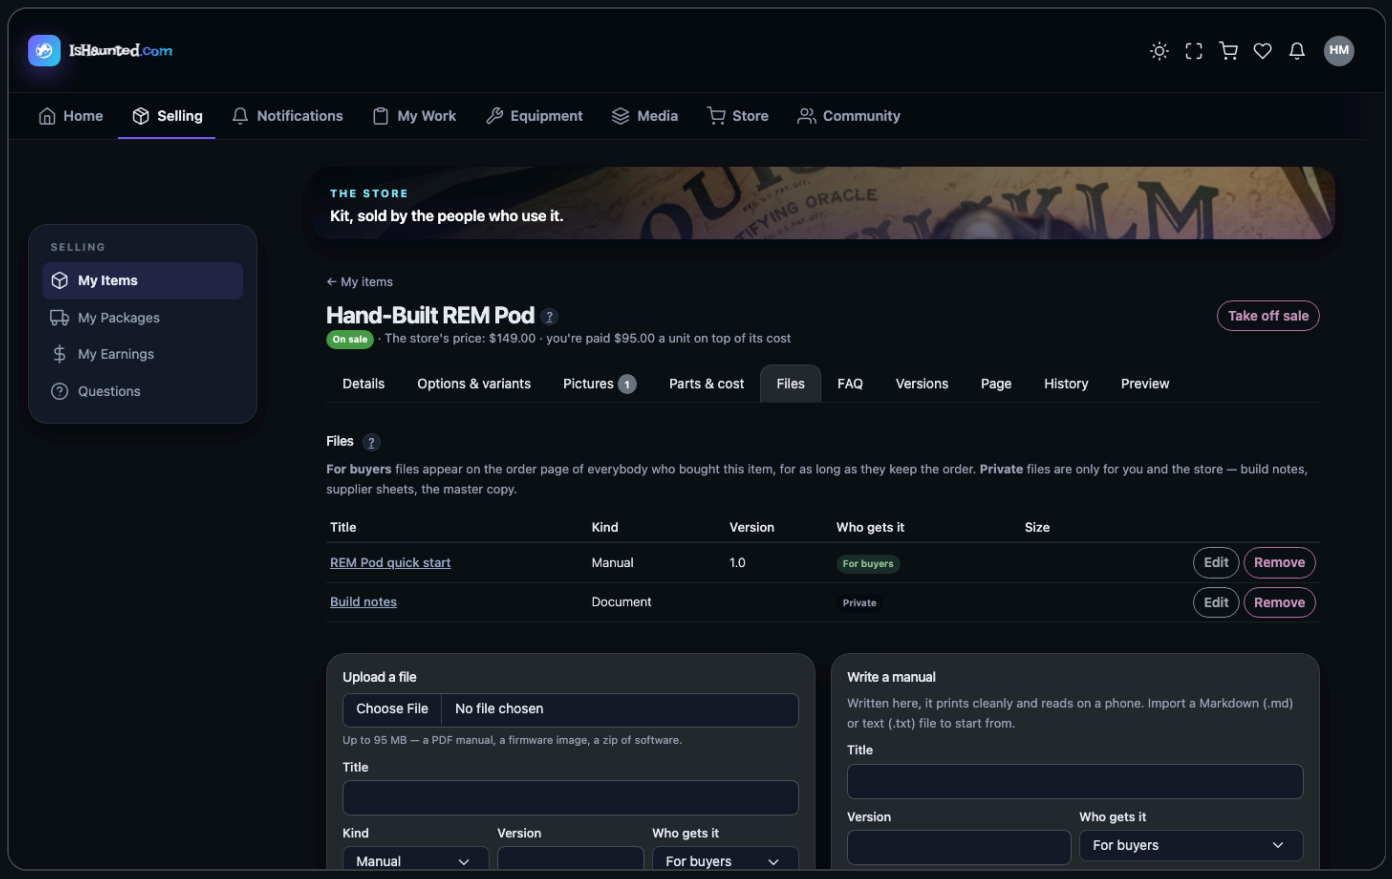

An item

Parts and cost. The parts list: what a unit costs to make. Never shown to shoppers.

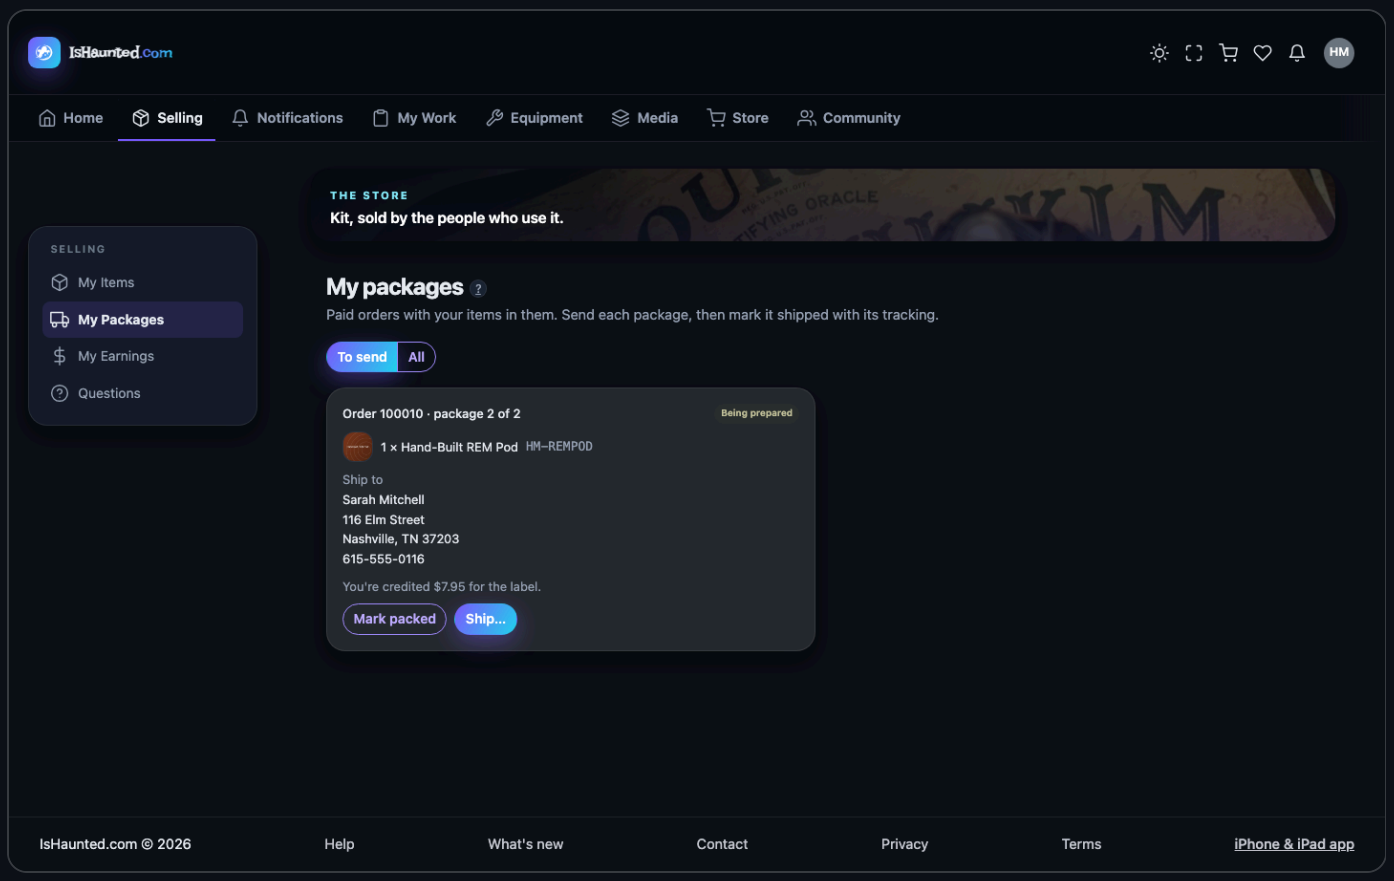

Parts and cost

Files. Manuals and firmware, each for buyers (downloadable from a paid order) or private.

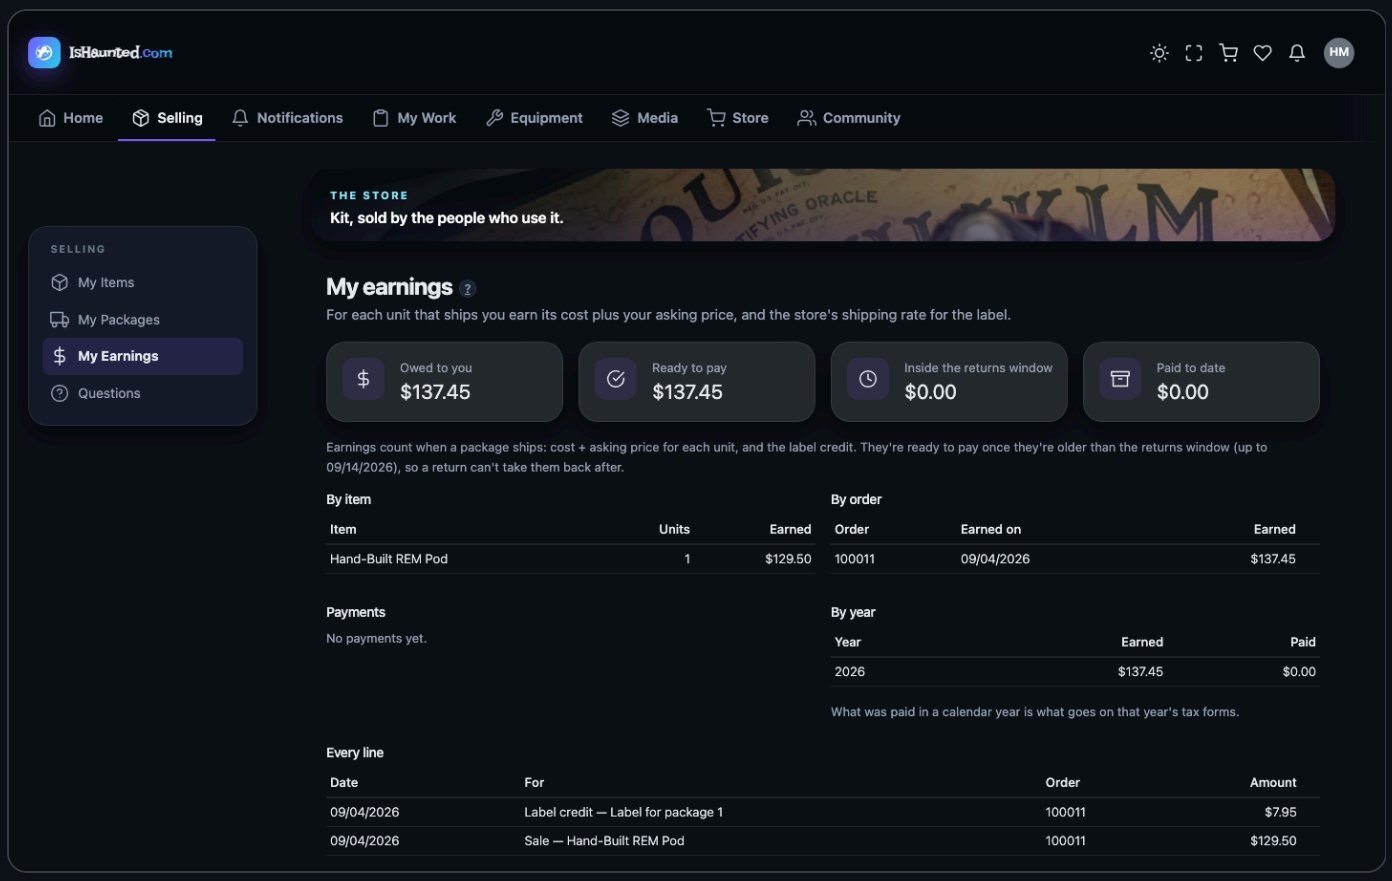

Files

My packages. Paid orders with their items in: the address, and Ship with carrier and tracking.

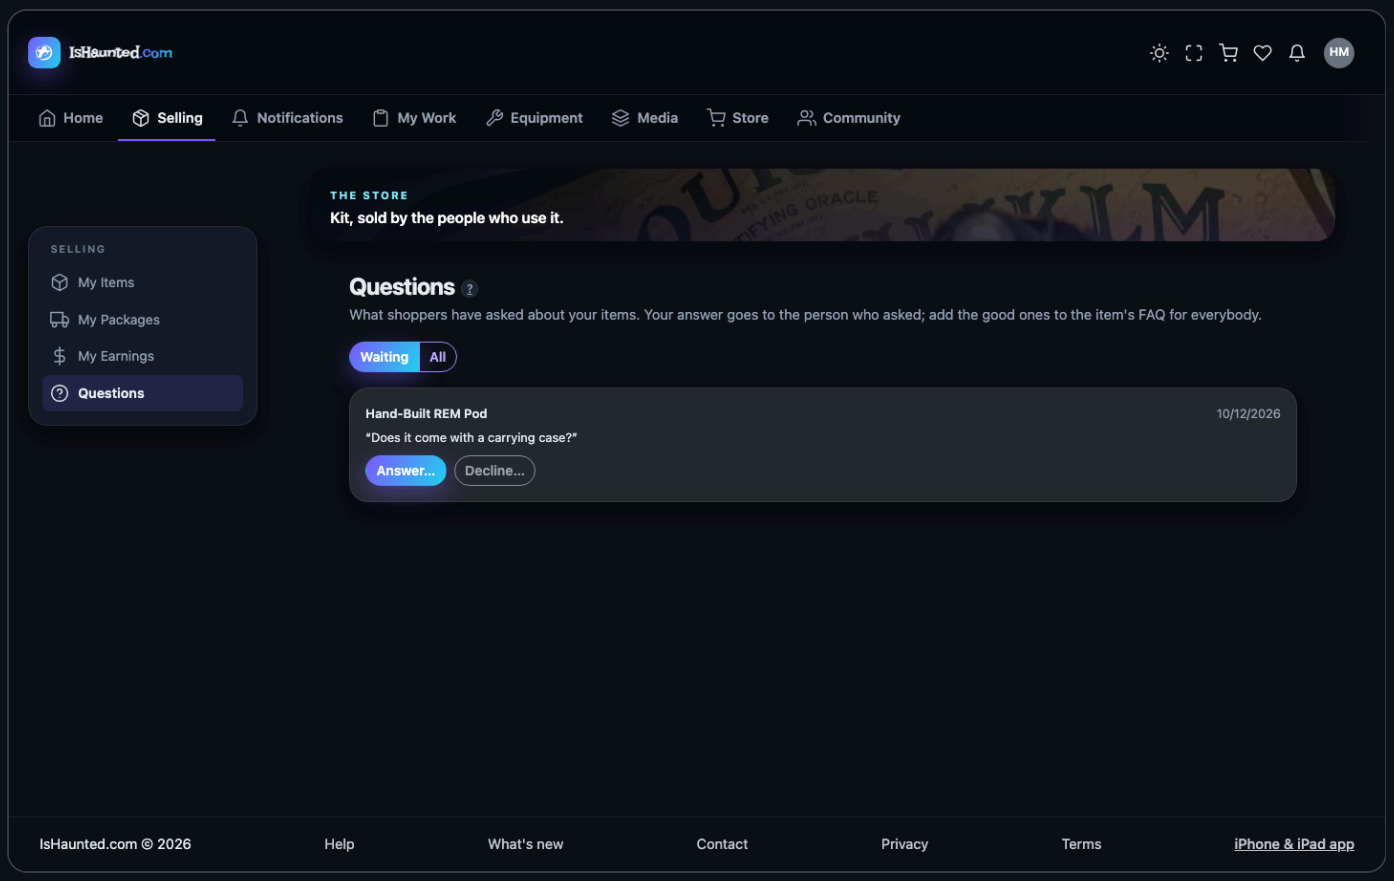

My packages

My earnings. Owed, ready to pay, paid — by item, order and year, for tax forms.

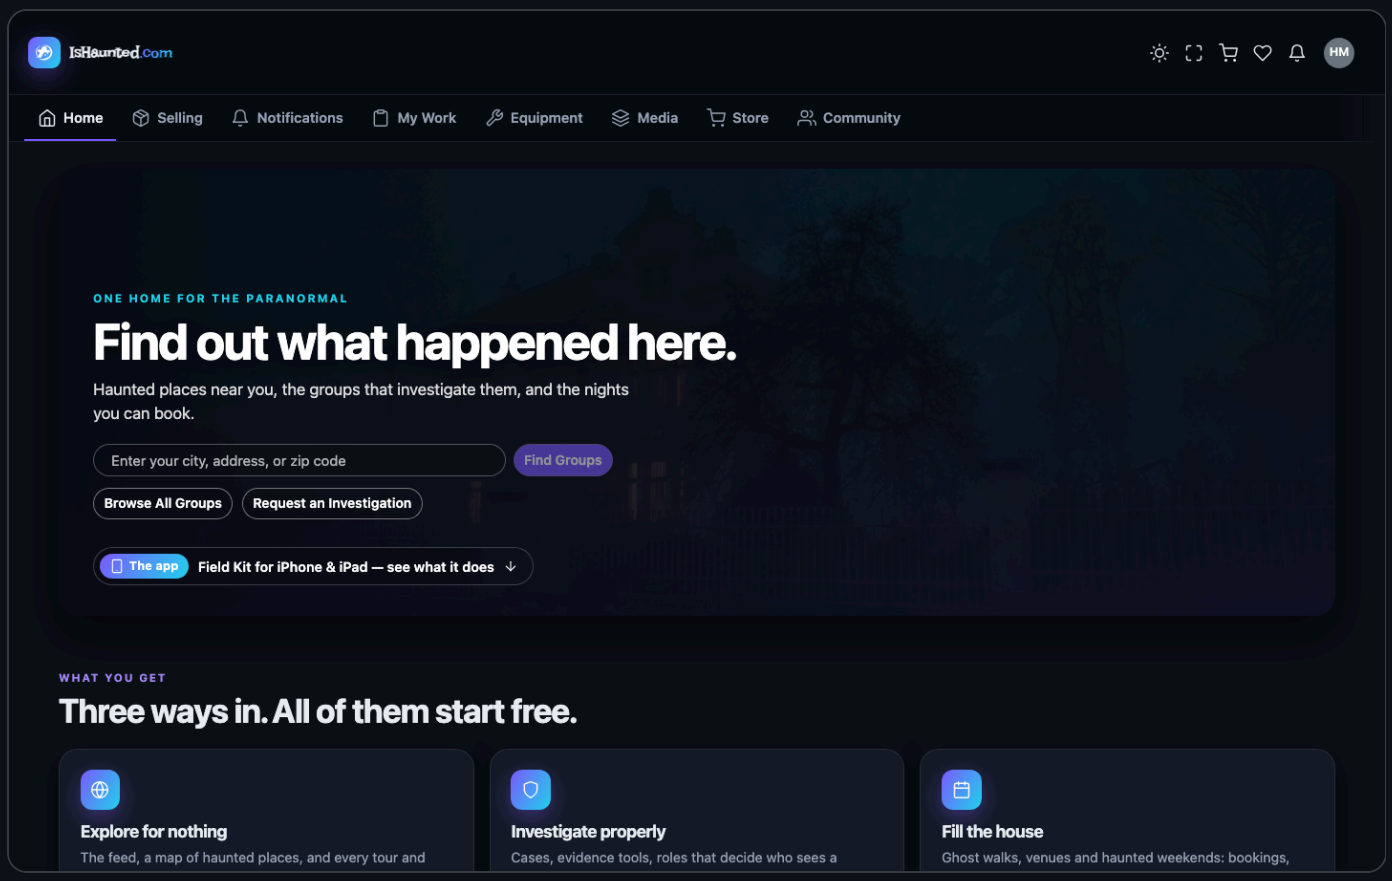

My earnings

Questions. Shoppers' questions, with nobody's name on them. Answer, decline, or add to the FAQ.

Questions

Refused store admin. The store's own administration refuses a seller.
