

IsHaunted — The site administrator

Runs the platform itself. Passes every permission check, everywhere. Written for a developer joining the project.

Every screenshot shows simulated, seeded data, captured in dark mode while signed in as this user type. Nothing here is a real person, case or investigation. Where a page shows a refusal, that is the designed behaviour for this seat.

The SuperAdmin operates the site rather than using it: people, groups, taxonomies, billing, moderation, and the diagnostics that say whether the platform is healthy.

Two of these screens exist because something went wrong and could not be seen. Outgoing Mail exists because a real sign-up produced no email and nothing anywhere recorded it — a failure that is invisible from every other surface, since the account exists and the site is up. Rate limits and the audit log are the same idea: the platform explaining itself rather than requiring somebody to read the database.

How this site decides what you may see

Two things gate every surface, and they are different questions:

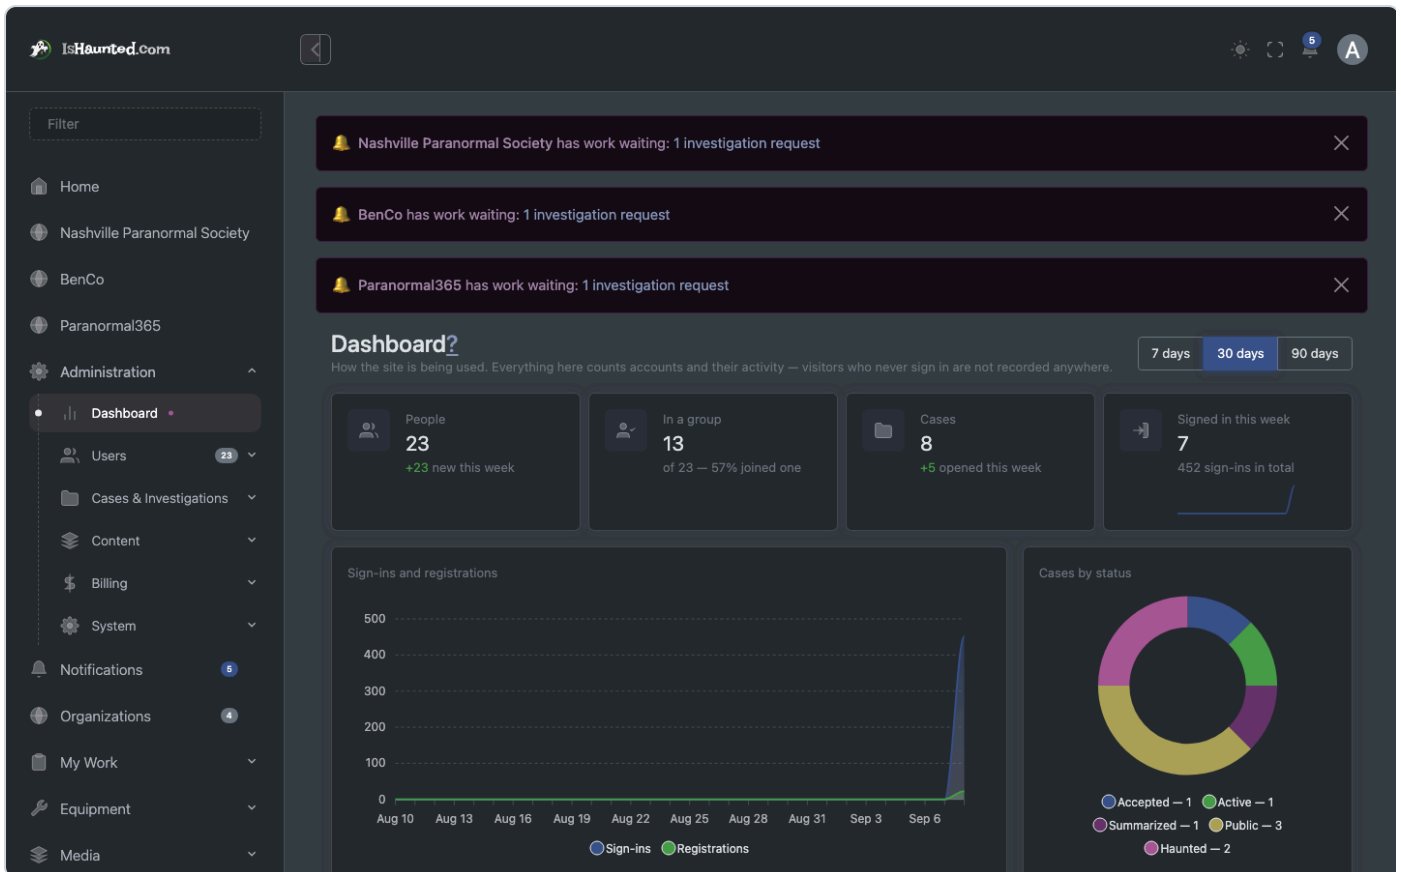

Your seat in a group — owner, administrator, member, viewer — answers "may this person do this?". The group's plan answers "does this group pay for this at all?". A member of a group whose plan excludes an area is refused for a completely different reason than a viewer who is not allowed to write, and the site says which.

A refusal is never rendered as "nothing here." An empty list and a server saying no are different facts, and a page that shows the same grey nothing for both teaches people to distrust it. Every list goes through `LoadResult`, which carries loading, empty, refused, session-ended and rate-limited as distinct states — and every one of them has its own words on screen.

This matters when reading this document: where a screenshot shows a refusal, that is the designed behaviour for this seat, not a broken page.

Rate Limits

What the site's rate limits have turned away. You are told once per limit, by message; the totals here are where to look after that. Counts are written about once a minute, so the newest few refusals may not be included yet.

Nothing has been turned away. No rate limit has refused a request since this table was created. That is the normal state — a row appearing here means somebody, or something, hit a limit.
